

Azure Governance Workshop by Swisscom

For a regulated IT in the Azure Cloud

Give your IT a meaningful structure in the Azure Cloud

Azure creates countless new opportunities. Previously, internal teams involved in development and business depended on servers provided by internal IT departments. Nowadays, the necessary systems are run in the cloud without the involvement of internal IT departments, frequently resulting in a loss of both control and compliant IT operations.

But even if your internal IT department acts as the service provider for Azure, there is still work to do. Azure is very different from traditional data centres. Existing rules must be extended and adapted to the new environment. This is the only way the possibilities offered by Azure can be successfully exploited in the long run without causing any headaches.

Azure Governance Workshops – what you can expect

Our experts will guide cloud managers through a workshop held over two or four days. Together, we will devise a set of rules for the operation of resources in Azure: we will deliver best practices and key ideas, while IT staff contribute current rules and take decisions about tomorrow's IT operations.

The workshop is available in two different formats:

- 2 days: does your company already have experience of Azure and some cloud managers with AZ-900 certification? Are you now considering how you should continue your journey to the cloud?

If so, this is the workshop for you. Together, we will lay a solid foundation without going into too much detail.

- 4 days: are you already on your journey to the cloud? Do your company's cloud managers hold AZ-103 or AZ-300 certification? Are you considering moving your data centre to the cloud?

If so, this version is for you. From naming conventions to monitoring strategies, we will work together to lay down all the rules for clear IT operations.

On request, we can also include these rules directly in Azure policies to ensure they are binding.

You will then be well prepared for your individual journey to the cloud and confident of being able to build on solid foundations, as your processes and Swisscom's experience with the cloud work together for your success.
