

Azure Base Camp Workshop by Swisscom

For a structured start in the Azure Cloud

Understanding the new cloud paradigm

There are always lots of questions at the beginning: Why Azure? How will my business benefit if I choose the cloud? How does Azure work and how will my employees benefit? How do I make sure cloud costs stay within my budget? And how do you actually connect existing IT systems with the cloud?

Answering these questions is a big challenge, especially at the start. Planning and operating cloud solutions are new tasks that IT departments have to learn about for themselves. In this workshop, we lay the foundations with our customers so they can successfully make the journey into this new world.

Azure Base Camp – what customers can expect

Our experts answer the most pressing questions about the ‘right’ way to use Azure: we explain how Azure is structured, the main differences between a cost model on CAPEX and OPEX, how applications are planned for Azure and how teams can develop themselves further.

The Azure Base Camp is a full-day workshop aimed at getting employees from architecture, technical IT and project teams, as well as from budget management and controlling, ‘Azure-ready’.

- Learning the basics: based on many, sometimes painfully learned lessons, we show how to get off to a clean start in the cloud and where the stumbling blocks are.
- All set: customers receive tailored recommendations for their first Azure deployments. We also present the extensive range of online learning content on Azure so that employees can embark on some self-study immediately.
- Optional support: on request, we can accompany our customers on their further journey into the cloud with workshops, advice and our Cloud Managed Services.

It is also possible to take an in-depth look at company-specific Azure governance in a follow-up programme. Or we can go into co-creation mode with employees and bring some use cases to Azure as PoCs.
